Land.

"This must be the house where Snow-White and Rose-Red live." exclaimed Puss in Boots Junior, as he came up to a lonely little cottage in front of which was a small garden in which grew two rose bushes, one red and the other white. He paused at the gate, when all of a sudden around the corner of the house came a his black bear. "How do you do. Sir Cat." growled he in a loud voice. "How is your health, Baron Bruin." said Puss, trying very hard to keep his voice from trembling; for to meet a big black bear suddenly is rather terrifying.
